It is common knowledge that companies which invest in their most valuable resource, their employees, are better able to maintain competitive advantage than organisations in similar industries that do not.

This investment is most productive when it is helping to develop individuals personally to work more efficiently and effectively in not only their specific job roles but also to broaden their skills base. An employee should have the freedom to be in control of his or her career and be helped to manage his or her potential as far as possible.

The training needs to be relevant to the individual rather than training for training's sake. The result is a more motivated and capable workforce which can work smarter and with greater confidence and is often more loyal to the company.

Magas Training run several training programmes - both short courses and intensive unit standard aligned - which are appropriate to account for the needs of your organisation. We will discuss with you what your objectives are - for example, improvements in areas such as productivity, internal communication, safety awareness motivation, and leadership, development - and present the learning programmes according to these objectives, take into considering time and budget availability.

LIVING OUR VISION

Magas Training is more than a company which helps people to create their own life choices; it has become our ethical and environmental way of life.

Charlotte Magagula had a vision of how she wanted to live her life, resigned from a prospering permanent job, and founded Magas Development and Training in 2013 and set about creating better learning opportunities for all individuals.

Having made this choice, Magas mission is to enable others to enrich themselves in their work and personal environment.

We help you to create changes in your life and work environment through:

- Working closely with employers and employees
- working with fellow professional practitioners

Ordinary people achieve extraordinary results in business and their personal lives. For many people, these results are achieved through and with the support of the correct training, up to date information and excellent service from their service provider.

Training

Teaching focuses on future possibilities and utilises learning from past experiences. Teaching is more about how things are done, rather than what things are done. It is about unlocking a person's potential and maximising their performance.

- Teaching is a lever for unleashing potential!
- A tool for unlocking performance!
- An approach to change!

The correct learning programmes can and does improve performance in individuals, teams, and the organisation itself.

On the Job Training

On the Job training not only develop skills and understanding for the specific job, but also always helps with personal fulfilment and self-improvement motivating learners to work correctly and the importance to adhere to safe work procedures.

Skills Programme

Skills programmes tend to be short courses (1 day, a week, a month, etc.), consisting of either one or more-unit standards, which when added together can eventually lead to a qualification.

With a Skills programme, a learner can learn a specific amount of work, which consists of a group of unit standards, instead of having to complete an entire qualification as in the case of a Learnership.

The exit points of skills programmes are in most instances prescribed by the needs of the learners.

A learner would be able to choose those unit standards of a learnership that make sense to him or her whilst gradually developing a qualification.

Other Courses

Magas also have written agreements with other service providers for skills programmes not on their accreditation list.

The training system and procedures are changing day by day. Magas will stay up to date with these requirements to ensure that we deliver the best service to all our clients and potential clients.

Magas Development and Training can assist employers with the following Training Programmes.
